Where the Laugh Comes In. George Fred Williams has the laugh on the democrats who used to prod him for declaring that tariff reform was not a fit democratic plank. He says he has, and there's no doubt

At the same time Theodore Roose-velt has the laugh on the republicans who wanted him to lead a tariff cru-sade. He knew what would happen to such a leader and he declined the honor. He left it for the party ma-chine experts to frame up a tariff re-form that would do for campaign purform that would do for campaign pur-poses. They knew they would be at-tacked for it, but they didin't care. They don't care yet. But Roosevelt, practical as he was, dodged that shady sort of game.

There's a hearty laugh all around, in fact, it's directly at the expense of the innocent voting public that took stock, first in a democratic promise of tariff reform, and then in a republi-can promise.—Boston Journal.

Quarters Remodelled with Additional Facilities-Dining Room for Open House Members - Season Starts

Among the most important changes are the arrangements on the main floor, which is now devoted wholly to business, leaving all the floors above that exclusively to the Haile club. On the first floor there will be the ladies' restaurant as before for Haile club members, with the room adjoining as a business office for the head directress of the club and the bookkeeper. The room on the rear of the building, overlooking the garden and formerly the apartments of Mr. and Mrs. Saunier, has been converted into a dining room for the Open House members, who formerly were patrons of the noon lunch Mrs. Saunier, whose delicious French cooking has already achieved a deserved reputation, Mr. Saunier being in charge of the dining room for the Oren House members. All the profits of the restaurants are now to go directly to the Halle club, which expects to derive thereby a considerable sum for a highly successful season.

It had been expected to have the opening on Sunday with a musical afternoon, but on account of the death Friday morning of one of its members of whom the girls were all very fond, this plan has been given up, but the club with the two restaurants will be open on Monday without any formality.

Since the club closed in July there have been numerous changes and improvements in the building. From top to bottom all the paint has been newly, done in white enamel and all the walls of the halls have been finished in canvas painted a bright yellow and the stairs finished in dark stain.

Among the most important changes are the arrangements on the main floor, where the Halle club apartments begin, the room on the rear, which was formerly the symmasium, has been transformed into a reading room, fit a most charming spot, the walls are finished in yellow and green velvet curtains hang at the windows. The furniture is of mission style, wicker easy chairs and morris chairs, with magazine tables lighted by electric lamps, a piano and white enamel seats around the side, wiled high with sofa pillows. Adjoining this is the small room for the library. The gymnasium has been moved upstairs into the hall, but the apparatus of the war and not interfere with the rear.
